

RNDr. Janka Rapčanová

E-mail: janka.rapcanova@truni.sk

She graduated in Virology from the Faculty of Natural Sciences at Comenius University, where, as part of her rigorous studies, she focused on research of the hepatitis B virus in the blood donor population. At the same time, she worked at the National Transfusion Service of the Slovak Republic, where she is currently employed as a quality system coordinator, focusing on managing and optimising processes in transfusion medicine. Since January 2025, she has been working as an assistant professor at the Department of Public Health at Trnava University, where she is involved in teaching the following subjects: organization and provision of healthcare, clinical studies, and state health supervision.

Year of birth: 1994